Did you know your computer has its own I.D. number that appears on the Internet every time you log on?

Hackers — even Al Qaeda cyber-terrorists — know you're on-line the moment you sign on!

A few weeks ago I signed on to the Internet for some R&R after a day following up on Bat Boy, and lo and behold — dozens of bizarre numbers began appearing on-screen.

It turns out these were the I.D. numbers of hundreds of outside computers — most of them from colleges and universities — that were literally trying to access my little machine all at once.

Were college kids pulling a prank, or was this something more sinister? Perhaps Al Qaeda operatives had hijacked these computers to break into mine, so they could find out what we really had on Osama Bin Laden and his faithful goat.

Luckily, a simple, inexpensive firewall program stopped those intruders cold.

This can happen to any on-line computer, and it's already happened to you. Our reporter believed his own story's security advice on Page 68, and — you guessed it — immediately found a virus in his home PC, one that compromised his machine.

We're presenting an exposé revealing how at risk your computer really is, starting on Page 6. If you operate a PC and you surf the Net, it's a must-read warning!

And to all those institutions of higher education with lax network security, know this: My computer logged your addresses. Let's lock the door on cyber-terrorists — or at least, close your windows.

Like every issue before it, this issue of Weekly World News will save you a ton of money!

NAZI ROCKET CRASH-LANDS IN LONDON 58 YEARS AFTER IT WAS LAUNCHED!

MORE than 500 A4/V2 rockets were launched by the Germans between September 1944 and March 1945.

A SERIAL number on the rocket confirms that it is a Dornberger A4/V2, and according to military records it was fired from a launch site in Wassenaar, the Netherlands, on Sept. 9, 1944.

LONDON — A German rocket launched in 1944 "sailed through a time warp" and landed on a London street 58 mind-boggling years after it was fired from a secret Nazi launching pad in Holland, say cops — one of whom witnessed the landing with his own eyes.

No one was injured or killed when the long lost A4/V2 rocket smashed down on a London street on November 1, ripping through the pavement and causing minor accidents as cars swerved to avoid hitting it.

"Thank God it didn't detonate," a Scotland Yard spokesman told reporters. "This thing could've caused some serious damage."

Incredibly, the rocket didn't do much damage, when it bounced off a roof and landed in the street," said the spokesman. "It's pretty beat up, but you can easily recognize it as one of the V2 type rockets the Germans dropped on us in WW2."

By COREY MICHAELS

The rocket sailed through a time warp and finally reached its target after all these years.

"We were able to make out a serial number and confirm that it was a Dornberger A4/V2," he continued. "And military records indicate that it was fired from a launch site in Wassenaar the Netherlands, on Sept. 9, 1944.

"How [so] A4/V2 rockets struck in and around London in a vicious bombing campaign that lasted from September 1944 to March 1945," he added. "Most were accounted for — but a handful were not.

"Coincidentally, a police officer who just happened to be in the area witnessed the late-night strike.

"He said there was a loud thud, the ground shook, and store windows shattered, but

EXPERT Dr. Philip Delaplant

Belgium's famed Institute for Paranormal Studies, which specializes in unexplained World War II phenomena, offers up one possible explanation.

The rocket sailed into a time warp in 1944 and sailed out in 2002 — 58 years later.

There are hundreds of alleged war-related time-warp incidents on record, he notes, none of which are well understood.

Whatever the reason for the sudden reappearance of the German rocket, Dr. Delaplant notes, "We're just lucky it was a dud.

"This thing contains enough explosives to destroy a city block and kill hundreds of people.

The weeping Virgin Mary statue is a blessing, not a curse!

Dear Editor:

Regarding your story on the Virgin Mary statue weeping and "ruining" a church — I have a very simple solution for the Rev. Moore (October 22 issue).

He should build a beautiful fountain outside the church and pipe the weeping lady's tears into it. And then he should get down on his knees and pray for forgiveness for not appreciating a miracle in a world of so few miracles.

Shirley M.

That's a great solution, Shirley. It sounds like you really appreciate a good miracle. Hopefully Rev. Moore will listen to your suggestion.

Dear Weekly World News:
I had to write in about your Nov. 5, 2002, issue with the story on, "Jesus' Sandals Found." As I read the story, I noticed on the left sandal an image of Jesus' beautiful face. And, in the dim light, on the right sandal, I saw an image of an older man — our Holy Father!

It is said that "Jesus sitteth at the right hand of our Father."

Well, these sandals show that it is so.

In order to see these beautiful images, you have to look with your heart and not with your eyes.

God bless you.

We admit, we never noticed those images until you pointed them out — but sure enough, if you look close enough, there they are. That only gives further proof that these sandals are the real deal. You must have holy vision!

Police seek hero mystery boy in capture of child molester

By MIKE FOSTER
Weekly World News

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Police say they caught a notorious pedophile with help from a mysterious, "half-human, half-animal" hitchhiker!

Cops nabbed twice-convicted child molester Hans Skarken after an unidentified adolescent mauled him with teeth and fingernails — leaving deep wounds all over his body.

Skarken, who was in the U.S. illegally, is now recuperating in a hospital — heavily bandaged and chained to his bed.

He acknowledges offering a ride to the strange hitchhiker, who he describes as under 4-feet tall, bald, with odd pointy ears, wearing raggedy clothes. But he denies ever laying a hand on the lad.

"That vicious little animal attacked me for no reason," sex creep Skarken, 37, whimpered in an exclusive phone interview. "I'm lucky to be alive."

Skarken, a native of Germany who served time in his home country for assaulting dozens of minors, insists that he was just being a Good Samaritan when he saw the boy and pulled over.

"He was shivering and he looked so helpless. I offered him a ride," Skarken says. "I even gave him candy bars that I keep in my glove compartment."

THE MYSTERY CHILD shown in this police artist's computer rendering bears an uncanny resemblance to our favorite misfit, Bat Boy!

Skarken says he tried to strike up a conversation, but his passenger merely grunted in response.

Based on Skarken's M.O., cops now believe the sleazy foreigner probably made "some kind of a sexual overture" toward the boy.

He adamantly rejects such speculation, claiming the boy suddenly "went berserk" and started clawing at him, while screeching like a banshee.

"Then he hurled me out of the car like a rag doll," Skarken says. The tiny hitchhiker then hopped into driver's seat and sped away, leaving Skarken bleeding on the road.

A passing motorist spotted him and called 911. EMTs who rushed the injured man to the nearest hospital said cops it looked like he'd been "mauled by a mountain lion."

A police investigation identified the mauling victim as Skarken — who is now also suspected in seven recent child molestations in the area.

Incredibly, based on Skarken's bizarre description, Indiana authorities searching for the mysterious youth believe he could be the elusive Bat Boy.

"We want to find out if the juvenile is, in fact, Bat Boy, and, if so, we'll turn him over to the proper law-enforcement agency," says a police source, adding that feds have ordered cops not to discuss the case publicly.

IS YOUR COLLEGE

WARNING: Your school computer may be hijacked by Al Qaeda hackers!

By MICHAEL FORSYTH
Weekly World News

BOCA RATON, Fla. — An insidious invasion of computers all over the country may be part of a diabolical cyber-jihad launched by Al Qaeda terrorists, experts warn. And shockingly, the launch pad for the massive cyber-attack on America could be our very own college campuses!

WEEKLY WORLD NEWS EXCLUSIVE!

On November 4, 2002, hundreds of attempts were made to invade the home PC of Weekly World News editor-in-chief Dick Kulpa — and shockingly, many of the probes were traced to college and university-based computers.

Dozens of different institutions were involved in the digital assault — their systems possibly commandeered by outsiders.

When contacted by Kulpa, who logged the attempts and identities of every computer involved, an official at the University of Wisconsin admitted a computer on its network had been "compromised."

A special WWN investigation has since revealed that our country's college computers could be its Achilles' Heel. Security at college computer networks is so lax that it borders on a national scandal.

"Colleges and institutions of higher learning have to balance security with the need for open access," explains Aaron Lee, product manager for the computer-software giant Symantec. "Corporations are more focused on security."

Shockingly, when he was asked whether vulnerable college networks could be used to launch a massive terrorist cyber-attack on America, the expert acknowledged, "Yes, it's conceivable that could happen."

It's unclear as to how a Net-based body war on America, instead of hijacking planes, they'll be hijacking computers.

Only a few days after the September 11 attacks, a Pakistani group affiliated with Al Qaeda hacked into two of the U.S. government's Web services, including one at the Defense Department, and declared a "cyber-jihad" against the United States. Since then, attacks have been made on the Pentagon, Energy Department and NASA, resulting in the theft of vital data.

"Our enemies are already targeting our networks," North Carolina Sen. John Edwards has warned.

"We now live in a world where a terrorist can do as much damage with a keyboard and a modem as with a bomb."

Chillingly, Richard Clarke, special adviser to the President for cyberspace security, has warned that jihad-crazed cyber-terrorists might gain control over America's flight control towers and even our nuclear power plants.

"Cyber-terrorists know that, with the push of a button, emergency services — police, fire and ambulances — can be paralyzed, power for entire

Is E.T. trying to hack into your computer?

Earthbound bad guys may be not be the only ones hacking their way into your PC — experts now warn that extraterrestrials could also be invading computers around the world!

"The real question we have to worry about isn't by flying saucer, it's by alien computer viruses," according to a NASA source.

NASA insiders confirm that over the last nine months, computers aboard at least 11 U.S. satellites and space-based telescopes have been infected by programs of "apparently non-Earth" origin. More alarming, these compromised computers have repeatedly attempted to access government computers on Earth.

"We don't know what the E.T.'s are trying to do, but given their level of technical superiority, it's going to be very, very

Such commandeered computers are known as "zombies," and hackers routinely use them to spread viruses and launch attacks on the Internet.

the reality is that whenever you visit a Web site, send an e-mail or enter a chat room, your computer broadcasts a unique "IP address" that Internet stalkers can use to identify you and track you down. But many hackers don't really care who they victimize.

Cockatoo may crack case

DALLAS — A heroic cockatoo gave his life trying to save his master from knife-wielding thugs. And he may provide the evidence that nails the creeps — from beyond the grave!

Twin tots are on trial for murdering a Dallas man in a dispute over money. Prosecutors say the victim's pet cockatoo flew at the attackers and pecked at their heads in a desperate bid to foil the attack.

The bird died in the struggle, and cops later found his horribly mutilated corpse with a fork in his back and one of his legs cut off.

Prosecutors say DNA tests on blood at the scene prove the twins had been there — and they're doing more DNA tests on the bird, to further tighten the noose.

"In my 23 years on the job," says a prosecutor, "I've never seen anything like this. They did an autopsy on the bird, and I've never heard of that either."

Bloodthirsty squirrel holds entire town hostage

KNUTSFORD, England — Residents of this small town are resting a little easier, after an outraged man shot and killed the attacker who's held them in the grip of fear for weeks: A squirrel!

Pub-up grandpa Geoff Barth got an air gun and executed the bloodthirsty beast — just as it was about to attack him.

The squirrel had assaulted dozens of people during its reign of terror, and even chased grown men out of its path. Many terrified townsfolk refused to let their children play outdoors while the rogue rodent was still at large.

But when the squirrel bit Barth's 2-year-old granddaughter on her face, he decided enough was enough — and blasted the beast right out of its tree.

"When I tracked him down I was surprised how big he was," says 63-year-old Barth, quoted in the area newspaper. "He came down a tree and was headed for me, but I shot him before he jumped."

"It's a shame he went nuts," Barth says grimly. "But I couldn't let this little bugger hold the town hostage."

New study forces gay rams out of the closet!

PORTLAND, Ore. — The macho image of the ram has been smashed by a shocking study that says one in 10 of the horned creatures is gay!

Six to eight percent of domestic rams only date and mate with other male sheep, never with the opposite sex, reveal researchers at Oregon Health and Sciences University.

The researchers say scientists have known for years about the sexually sheep. They outed the randy rams to announce the results of a newer study, comparing the brains of gay and straight rams.

The finding could yield other links between the brain and sexual behavior.

And sheep-industry insiders weren't surprised to learn rams were being herded out of the closet.

"Anyone who spends any time with sheep knows about the queer ones," asserts a Montana rancher who asks to remain anonymous.

Rub Santa and your Christmas wishes will come true!

By MARS CARRE/Weekly World News

TOKYO, Japan — Hey kids! You can get everything you want for Christmas, from go-carts and ponies to a lifetime supply of video games and cool designer clothes, just by rubbing the Smilin' Santa that a leading children's magazine says "is guaranteed to make your every wish and dream for the holidays come true."

And putting the lucky Santa's power to work for you is a snap, claims Japan's famous Kid Planet magazine.

In a sensational cover story, children were instructed to "look into the Jolly Old Elf's eyes and don't be shy — tell him everything that comes to mind.

"There is no gift too big or too expensive for our Magical Good Luck Holiday Doll," the report continued. "Rich or poor — it doesn't matter. You can have anything you want this year if you ask for it."

"The Smilin' Santa doll is mind powerful," declared Akira Takamura, the famed Tokyo-based TV psychic who created the image and empowered it with what she calls the "subtle energies that will make all holiday wishes come true for children everywhere.

"If you believe in the doll it will bring you great happiness during the season that, traditionally, has been a most unhappy one hellish for poor children whose parents simply can't afford the fancy and expensive gifts that rich parents lavish on their children.

"But no child has to go without this holiday season. Smilin' Santa is the great equalizer. I'm sure many adults will like it, too."

While Takamura has a reputation for supporting numerous charities with the estimated $300 million fortune she has amassed as one of the Orient's most visible and popular psychics, her claims for the Santa charm have outraged critics who say she is selling millions of desperately needy children up for a full-time Christmas day.

It hasn't helped matters that hucksters and rip-off artists are selling rich selling looking Smilin Santa holiday dolls — dolls that Takamura hasn't "empowered" — to poor children on the streets of Tokyo and other Japanese cities for $2 to $5 a pop.

PARENTS are likely to share in the anguish of their child's Christmas disappointment

Thieves have a field day, police say.

"These poor children are running around smiling and laughing and telling everybody they're getting presents and gifts and expensive video games and clothes at Christmas.

"But you know and I know they aren't getting anything. They'll be damn lucky to get a cup of coal."

Takamura isn't the only one feeling the ire. Kid Planet editor Keiko Ueda has come under fire, too.

Pressed to explain why she would publish a magic doll in a magazine better known for its unbiased, youth-oriented reporting on social and political issues of the environment, Ueda insisted that the Smilin Santa will work "if the eyes of the world open their eyes, our hearts and their wallets to help poor children this holiday season.

"I know the doll would be controversial," she said. "But I believe in magic — the magic we cannot account for, and the magic we make for ourselves."

The psychic concludes. "There is no doubt in my mind that children will rub this image and receive exactly what they asked for, rather than people like you and me who share our good fortune or those mysterious and unseen forces that are beyond the ability of humans to understand."

Akiko Takamura claims that rubbing the "Smilin' Santa" will make it easy to get gifts like this possible for any child.

YOU BE THE JUDGE

Was Japanese magazine editor Keiko Ueda right to publish the Smilin' Santa doll — or was she cruelly selling poor kids up for a heartbreaking holiday fall? We want to know what YOU think!

☐ YES! The magazine did the right thing. It's giving kids hope for the holidays.

☐ NO! They are unconscionably raising the hopes of kids who will only end up disappointed on Christmas morning.

New sightings of the legendary Loch Ness monster, widely believed to be a surviving dinosaur, has revived concerns that not all of the giant reptiles are extinct. What would happen if you were to run into one of these frightening behemoths while vacationing in some remote, exotic locale?

Now, from paleontologists and animal-attack experts, are tips that could help you get through such a potentially deadly encounter alive:

● DON'T LEAVE YOUR CAR. Despite what you've seen in movies, a dinosaur is unlikely to attack an inflatable object such as a car as long as you're in it. Avoid leaving the engine or "heater" shots like trying to ruin the creature.

● DETERMINE IF IT'S A HERBIVORE OR A MEAT-EATER. A long neck and tiny head usually denotes a plant eater. That means that as long as you stay clear of its feet, you're safe to snap photos and tell your grandchildren stories. Sharp teeth and powerful hind legs, meant for chasing prey, are characteristic of a carnivore like the dreaded T. rex.

● DON'T PANIC. Even if you do identify the creature as a T. rex and are out in the open, many experts think it's unlikely a scavenger will search you unless you do something stupid.

● DON'T STAND STILL. That was the strategy adopted by characters in Jurassic Park. But since the flick came out, Chicago paleontologist Gene Gaines discovered that "Sue," the most complete T. rex skeleton ever found, had sharpey's scales (the skin of pterodactyls and could detect you by smell alone.

● DISGUISE YOUR SCENT. The less like a predator's natural prey you smell, the better. If you have a floral perfume in your room, try dousing yourself in it.

● RACE AWAY SLOWLY. Overpowering a dino isn't an option, even a "plausible" giant like the duck-billed Edmontosaurus could run at 12 mph.

● DON'T CLIMB A TREE. An 18-foot branch could put you at eye level — or within mouth level — with a T. rex. Take refuge in a small cave.

● USE FIRE. If you have a cigarette lighter, use your shirt and a tree limb to form a torch and shield it as the cave entrance to meet with the dino's head. The fire-fanned heat will fire of the startled and sick reptile or prey.

● AIM FOR THE EYES. Grab a rock or stick and use it only because

WANTED: Dullest man in America seeks boring beauty

TOPEKA, Kan. — Bob McTeague collects Mantovani and Pat Boone records, has written a book on clothes-dryer lint, and likes hanging out at highway rest stops to spot out-of-state license plates. He's the dullest man in America, and he's looking for a gal who's as boring as he is!

"I have everything I need — a great career, my own house filled with luxurious shag carpeting in every room and a respected position with my neighborhood's Uniform Appearance Standards Committee," says Bob, 34.

All I need to complete my dream is a woman to share it all with."

BOB'S VITAL STATS

- Age: 34
- Height: 5'11"
- Weight: 197 lbs.
- Occupation: Typist for classified-advertising video service
- Hobbies and Diversions: Recycling, collecting typos in local newspapers, watching water boil under various conditions
- Proudest accomplishment: Named his company's Most Accurate Typist, three years in a row
- Personal Hero: Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan
- Favorite Pig-Out Foods: Low-salt saltine crackers with American cheese; mayonnaise
- Turn-Ons: Eyeglasses, loafers with socks, good dental hygiene including regular flossing
- Turn-Offs: Makeup, mini-skirts, giggling
- Dream Date: A romantic dinner at a top-notch cafeteria followed by a visit to the reference section of the public library and a moonlight stroll through the park with his-and-hers metal detectors
- Quote: "I'm as dull as dishwater — but I'll

Crook leaves ID & family photo at crime scene

WARREN, Mich. — A man accused of stealing could've gotten away with it if only he hadn't left behind a picture of himself.

Cops say the accused thief took cash from a store's cash drawer, but he realized, too, he dropped several pieces of identification — including a family photo.

Cops used the ID to track the suspect to his home, and the photo to help witnesses identify him — which wasn't hard, since he was the only man in it.

The photographic offender was busted for the crime.

Drunk mom lets kid play with gun

FALMICIAN, Portugal — Some kids like to play with their dad at the shooting range — other kids like to play with guns. But you'd have to be a pretty dopey parent not to let your kid do that.

One misguided mom gave in to her little boy's demand to play with his dad's gun at the lake — and not surprisingly, the kid accidentally shot her in the belly.

The wounded woman was rushed to the hospital and survived.

Trashed panda tie up traffic

AUGSBURG, Germany — Traffic got tied in knots when a zoo truck hit electric lines the street.

"The roads were blocked for hours — it was gridlocked," says a cop.

He says the 30-year-old lorry driver was fighting with his girlfriend, and threw a pair of underpants — a two-thousand Deutsche mark pair of shorts with suspenders — into the street.

They looked so much like real shorts that the confused electricity there. Trams were forced to a halt, shocking a major roadway.

Cops had to use a crane to get the shorts back — and spoil the real guy.

BY ED ANGER DOUBLE FEATURE

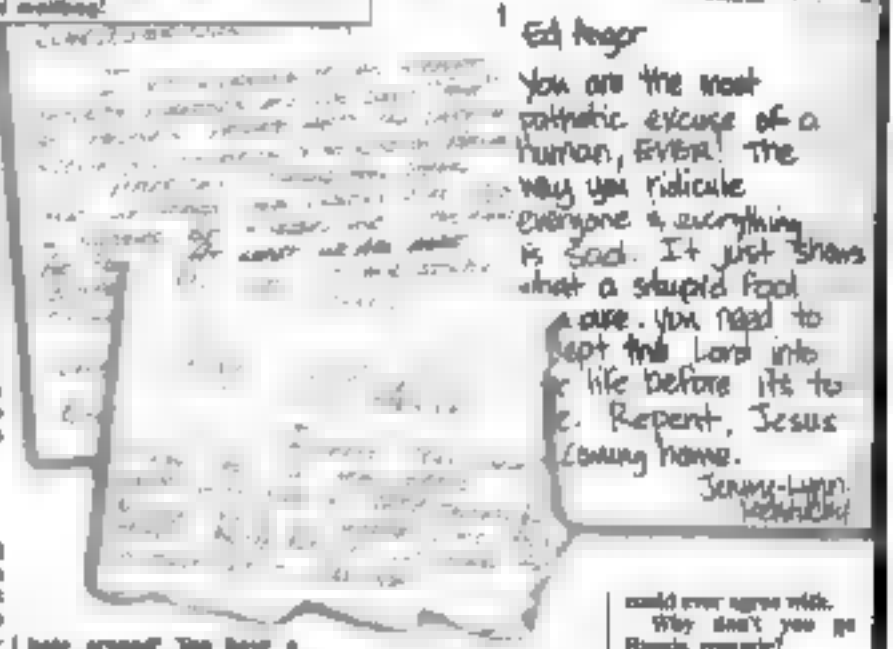
Readers fire back at Ed!

Dear Mr. Anger,
You
Tammy G.



Ed Anger
You are the most pathetic excuse of a human, Ever! The way you ridicule everyone & everything is Sad. It just shows what a stupid fool you are. You need to accept the Lord into your life before it's to late. Repent, Jesus Loving name.

Ed Anger has been getting more hate mail than ever lately — and the old goat loves it! He claims that it shows people are really reading his column — and thinking about what he's got to say. Now our readers are the ones who are pig-bitting mad! Ol' Ed's got some pretty unpopular opinions, and he's got people champing at the bit to get in a rebuttal. Here is a random sampling of the huge outpouring of mail we've had about Ed's recent columns! Let's dip into the old mailbag!

Dear Mr. Anger:

You have written about turning Iraq into the world's largest prison. I say, hell-sure! Don't waste the airplane fuel by flying way over there. Just drop these dregs of society out the plane's side door without a parachute over the ocean.

It might even keep the sharks from shark attacks if we feed them satan prisoners every week or so.

Your fellow Southern countryman,

Billy J.

Hey, you stupid old man, I'm really getting sick of you bashing Al Gore and the liberal Democrats. You and all the other right wing nuts ought to just admit that the only reason "Dubya" Bush is in office is that he bought off the Supreme Court. And for your information, if it weren't for us liberals you wouldn't be able to collect that fat welfare payment you call a Social Security check, which pays you a heck of a lot more than you ever put into it. Why don't you go to Iraq and fight for the oil companies you're so hot to defend, you dried-up old prune?

Dear Ed Anger:

I think I know why you are so angry all the time. It's because you can't function in the sack. You are not a real man like my husband. I bet you haven't made love to your ugly wife in years. I bet you don't even remember how to do it. I think you are a very sad and lonely man who deserves whatever happens to him.

Dear Ed:

You rock, man! I am a card-carrying member of the KKK, and I think your ideas are totally on the money. You really know how to tell it like it is.

Keep on spreading the hate around! You have a standing offer to join our club any time.

Rock on!

Dear Worst Columnist Ever:

I tried to read your column once, but I found it to be the most pig-ass drivel worse than anything I've ever read in a comic book. This so-called column consists of nothing but hate-filled venom spewed by a clueless moronthropus.

Mr. Anger:

You should be fired. "My America?" Don't make me laugh. You have a warped, twisted view of America, one that no real American could ever agree with.

Why don't you go to Russia, comrade?

Frederick B.

Let's bring back God to America:

MAKE THE PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE MANDATORY

– in every office & school in America!

PRESIDENTIAL hopeful Howard Dean, the governor of Vermont, is one patriotic American. He and his staff say the Pledge of Allegiance before every meeting.

I'm madder than Pat Robertson at a Satanist convention at how all these left-wingers like Phil Donahue have been going on TV and criticizing our President.

A lot of what these whining pessemiks say borders on outright treason as far as I'm concerned. Even right here in our own offices, I heard one of the mailroom boys make some snide remark about America that I didn't much like.

It's great that a lot of schools brought back the Pledge of Allegiance right after September 11, but kids in all schools should say the pledge every day. And we need to have it in offices and factories and department stores out by jiminy.

Every morning, every boss in every company across the country ought to lead the entire staff in saying the Pledge — and any yellow bellied rat who refuses to swear loyalty to our great country should be fired on the spot, no questions asked.

President Bush has the right idea. He just signed that new law making sure the line "one nation under God" stays in the Pledge of Allegiance and the motto "In God we

But we have to go further if we want to bring God back to America and spread patriotic pride.

Let's put "In God we trust" right up on the U.S. flag, with one of the stripes and stars in over the doorway to every police building in the country, from the post office right down to the county jail.

Put the motto on school buses, subway cars, airplanes — plaster on the roof of the Pentagon, on the side of every tank we send into battle and bomb we drop on Iraq.

If that doesn't help to drive the message into everyone's head that we all should love America and we're one nation under God, I don't know what will.

It's time to get back to the idea of America for real. Real searing Americana, folks.

I'm so sick of radicals and foreign-born names and colleges

America. If we can't trust the foreigners, Americans had to go to school, please, who can we trust?

I can't help even thinking about Benedict Arnold, who was really a hero — a patriot — [illegible] and [illegible] who [illegible] had been Hale or Jack the Ripper.

I mean, even undermining the regime — even Clintonians hated Lewinsky's guts and despised her perverts.

And that doesn't give you the special Secret Service code. You may be married to a Democrat, but it helps a whole lot — and that time was when I met her back."

MICHAEL FRANCIS BERTOLINO

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. — Some people don't take breakups very well. This guy started hiding out in his ex-girlfriend's attic!

Bertolino allegedly used chloroform to drug the woman while she slept at night, and then raped her. He also allegedly used the phone lines in Sister to her computer.

Bertolino is charged with burglary, computer tampering, clandestine surveillance and interception of private communications. He is also wanted in connection with a federal arrest warrant for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. He is wanted by the Internal Revenue Service for back taxes, aiding and abetting, and tax evasion since 1988.

The fugitive pretends to be a retired military intelligence officer or government spy, and is considered by authorities to be a master of disguise — wearing wigs, hats and beards to alter his appearance.

Bertolino is a 5-foot-10-inch, 170-pound white man with brown eyes and gray hair.

Bertolino should be considered armed and dangerous.

The snatch didn't leave the victim, Lenya Smith, who is a county guard at the county jail, thrilled and her umbrella to give the thief a good thrashing.

Smith — still in possession of her purse — then followed the thief to a local hospital where she told hospital security officers what had happened. Hospital security held the suspect until the police arrived.

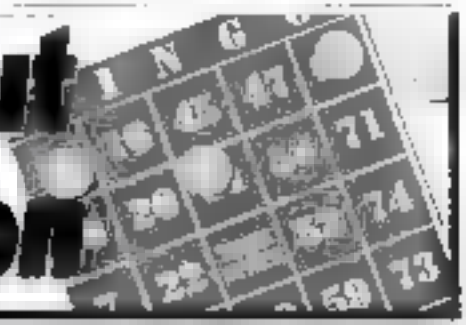
Granny collapses but bingo game keeps on going!



LIVERPOOL, England — A woman keeled over from a heart attack while playing bingo, and the heartless game managers just kept calling numbers!

"It was just a small game with a prize something like $25 — it could easily have been stopped," fumes one of the dead woman's daughters. "She was obviously ill and it was totally insensitive."

While paramedics tried to revive the 61-year-old woman, other players and her family begged those in charge to call off the game.

But numbers kept getting called out.

The woman died later at a hospital.

"It was sick," declares one of the other players. "This poor woman was lying on the floor being resuscitated while her family stood around crying. But they carried on calling."

A spokeswoman for the company that owns the bingo hall says continuing games during medical emergencies is "considered to be the best practice. We have discussed this matter with the ambulance services," she says.

"They can deal with emergencies better if the audience is not distracted by the emergency they are attending."

I like to steal strangers' panties

Dear Dotti: I am a happy husband and father of two, but I have a deep, dark secret. I like to steal underwear from strangers' clotheslines and friends' drawers. I am addicted to "panty raids." It's all I can think about, Dotti, help me. How can I get over this sick obsession?" — Panty Raider in Oakland

Dear Panty Raider: I don't even know where to start with this one. You're sick. Let me find you the name of a good counselor who can help. And I'll have you with this pervert of newsprint. Quit stealing panties, panty raider!

Tell my mom to give back my driver's license

Dear Dotti: Will you help make my mom give me back my driver's license? I got kicked out of school for parking in a teacher's parking space for the third time. I'm the only one of my friends who is old enough to drive in my neighborhood and that makes me pretty cool. Plus I only dented the car two times so far. — Wheelman in Bloomington

Dear Wheelman: Sounds to me like you need to right a few wrongs and make a special effort. Either stop parking in the good people spaces, or get the good people spaces moved to the employee lot.

My lousy kids abandoned me and left me no place to live!

Dear Dotti: When my husband died, he left the house to the kids. They're all grown and married so I went on vacation. When I got back, they had sold the house, moved away and left no forwarding address! Now I can't find them and I have no place to live! What do I do? — Sans House in Blue Ridge

Dear Sans House: Forget about those ungrateful kids. They're not worth all your love.

Ed Anger is out of his mind!

Dear Dotti: Is that stupid fellow responsible for anger still bringing about that Japanese jerk he got in the new cheerios up Park Drop Hill? He'd make more sense if he charged with a beam top. Hopefully soon, before he cracks down on that great op singer. For a probable beaming at the month now. — Stealth of Canada

Dear Stealth: I am struggling to understand what you're trying to say. Please rephrase your question.

Will Roxanna and I ever get married?

Dear Dotti: I would like to know if a girl named Roxanna is meant to be my wife and will I have a bunch of my own? — Upholsterer in Crosley

Dear Upholsterer: Why do I have to tell you that you're single? I'm not your mind reader.

Neighbors' sexcapades are keeping me awake

Dear Dotti: My neighbors keep me awake at night with their sexual escapades, sometimes all I put an ear to the wall I can even hear the sounds of them engaging in intercourse. And if I hold a glass to the wall I can hear everything! It's making me sick. What do I do? Grossed Out in Eastwood

Dear Grossed Out: I'd put a glass to your own head and blow your brains out.

Is my wife making it with the tow truck driver?

Dear Dotti: One day my wife told me she had to go into town to run some errands — which seemed fine until she came back with a man driving a tow truck. I think that means my wife's cheating on me. What do you think? — Suspicious Mind in Cream Ridge

Dear Suspicious: I think it means your wife's car broke down and you're a fool.

Drunken hubby says he was abducted by space aliens and abused with beer & cigarettes

GIVE ME A JINGLE!

HOLIDAY dreams come true with the irresistible hunks, a Silverado legal secretary learns, when something as cheating and curling up in front of a fire with a good book — or a good man. This Christmas, she's out for an sparkling three flames with a guy!

Dear Dotti: I'm worried about my husband. He comes home night after night reeking of beer and cigarette smoke. I finally confronted him about it and he told me the most horrible story. He said he's being abducted by aliens, who then perform bizarre experiments on him, using beer and cigarettes.

I know there are many people out there who have been abducted. He's so brave. He says, "It's not so bad." How do I help my husband through these trying times? — UFO Widow in Westchester

Dear UFO Widow: If that's the story he's peddling, then you're the space cadet. Hint: If your husband comes home with strange hair on his coat, it isn't Bigfoot!

Forget your stomach — staple your mouth shut!

Dear Dotti: I've been heavy all my life. I go on diet after diet after diet and it's like I gain more weight. I didn't know what to do until I saw that TV story about getting your stomach stapled. Then you can't get it done? — Overeater in Elliot

Dear Overeater: You need to get your mouth stapled — not your stomach. It'll cut down on the annoying chatter — and the amount you eat.

How come all the blind dates my friend sets me up with are named John?

Dear Dotti: I've always had a hard time dating, so I was very happy that my friend Paul offered to set me up on some blind dates. They were great, and things got hot and heavy on every date. It was a little weird that they were all named John, but they all said I was a great escort. Paul is very anxious for me to go on even more dates. But I'm getting worn out. It's not like I'm a professional date! How do I tell Paul thanks but no thanks? — Had My Fill in L.A.

Dear Had My Fill: Tell Paul you're going to take a vacation from dating. Tell him you're going to Europe. Tell him you're going to get Arnold to pose nude.

The casino let me lose all my money!

Dear Dotti: I'm so mad at those casinos! I went to one and lost all my money. I have a gambling problem and instead of turning me away, they let me lose all my money. I'm going to sue these people for their irresponsible behavior. How do I get these casinos to stop taking all my money? — High Roller in Atlantic City

Dear High Roller: Stay out of the casinos, genius.

Crawl back in your cave you freakin' weirdo!

Dear Dotti: I like to dress up in a bear costume when I make love to my wife. But she is not into it at all. She thinks it is weird. I told her that lots of people do role-playing games like this and it's perfectly normal. Isn't that right, Dotti? — Big Bear in Boise

Not unlike true believers in other religions, witches, says Dr. Salver, believe a Supreme Being provided a plant, shrub, herb or spice to help humans achieve any purpose.

In the Judeo-Christian tradition, for example, the herb hyssop is touted as a [illegible] Bible verse, "Purge me with hyssop and I shall be clean."

Witches, notes Dr. Salver, probably have a better understanding of the healing and [illegible] herbs and spices than any other group, with the possible exception of the Chinese, whose own herbal tradition dates back at least [illegible] years.

FOR LOVE, MONEY, LUCK, HEALTH ...AND MORE!

LIME is nature's money magnet, bringing wealth to all who use it.

pared to spice up your sex life or arouse your lover sexually. Sniff while visualizing the love you want and carry a few of beans in your pocket or purse to open "the energy channels" that make you — and the object of your desire — more receptive to the love that is available to anyone and everyone who opens her mind and heart to it. Repeat as desired and don't be afraid to share the technique with your friends. The love they find also will flow into your life and vice versa, bringing happiness and peace of mind that will transform you

Money

Crumble dried sage leaves in your palms as you think about money and all the things you can use it for — pay the bills, financing your education or buying a fabulous new home or car. Visualize cold, hard cash flowing into your life as you crush the leaves and let them drop onto a table in front of you. Then finished, gather the crushed sage and sprinkle it outside in front of all the doors to your house as a kind of "money vortex" or "cash magnet." Or, alternately, you can cook with it to "revitalize" your magic.

Luck

To attract luck, you first have to open your mind and heart to the good fortune and opportunities that continually exist around each and every one of us. Ginger root can help. Smell it while visualizing the many good remembrance at least once a day, every day for maximum benefit. Carry a gingerroot with you to sniff as well. In addition to clearing your mind and allowing positive energies to flow freely into your life, ginger will energize you. Candid, though ginger can be a powerful sexual stimulant for men and women in some cultures, savvy women rub a little fresh ginger on their underwear panels to arouse their lovers. The essential oil from the fresh root can irritate your skin so use it sparingly. A little goes a long way.

Health

Ordinary lemon peel — the "zest" of the lemon — restores and maintains spectacular good health, banishing illnesses and afflictions and then keeping them away. To use it, says Dr. Selver, grate the skin of a lemon, allowing the bits to drop down into a very thin linen or cotton cloth. Pick up the cloth by its four ends, then twist until you have a snug ball of lemon peel. Tie off with string. Find a quiet place and clear your mind. Visualize yourself in excellent health as you sniff and inhale the lemon scent. If you are not well, visualize the fragrance healing your illness and banishing it from your body. Also visualize the scent energizing not just your body, but your mind — and spirit. Let your mind wander, and as you do, imagine the universe and everything in it as a single "energy" of which you are a part. Allow this infinite power to fill you with strength, purify your mind and body and reassure you of the negativity that can make you sick. Keep these thoughts and maintain this state of mind as long as you like. When ready, open your eyes and "return" to normal consciousness. Repeat as desired. According to Dr. Selver, you cannot overuse this magic.

LEMONS purify the mind and body and eliminate you of negativity that can make you sick.

Did a little person hang himself during filming of The Wizard of Oz?

MUNCHKINS serenade Dorothy (Judy Garland) in a classic scene from the movie The Wizard of Oz.

URBAN MYTHS & LEGENDS

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — It seems that not even Glenda the Good Witch, the fair Uzma — the charming old humbug the book and movie were named after — could mend the broken heart of a pitiful munchkin who hanged himself on the set of The Wizard of Oz.

At least that's the conclusion of some fans of the children's classic who insist that the corpse of the unfortunate little man can be seen swinging from a tree in the background of one of the film's most memorable scenes.

Hitchhikers vanish into thin air!

A COUPLE was stunned when a beautiful teenage hitchhiker they had picked up vanished from the backseat of their car — without a trace.

Are these apparitions hoaxes — or messengers from God?

A husband and wife were driving along a lonely country road one dark night and stopped for a female hitchhiker. The pretty young woman asked for a ride to her home just a few miles up the road.

The travelers obliged and continued on with the woman riding silently in the backseat. As they drew near the house, the driver turned to inform the passenger they were arriving, only to discover she had vanished from the car without a trace!

Freaked out, the travelers quizzed the house staff, learning that a woman matching the description of the hitchhiker had died several years earlier in a car accident.

Her ghost, the astonished travelers were told, was often seen wandering beside the highway.

Stories like this, recounted by the famous — previously referred to as the lure of the "Vanishing Hitchhiker" — are known as one of the oldest urban myths — versions of it have been traced as far back as the 1800s with the phantom hitchhiker picked up by a horse and buggy instead of a car.

The story is so widespread that a top expert on urban legends Dr. Jan Harold Brunvand, titled the first volume of his latest book after it — "The Vanishing Hitchhiker: American Urban Legends and Their Meanings."

But does the fact that the same event is reported all over the world and in different time periods prove that the people it really happened to are telling the truth?

Some might argue that God sends these ghostly hitchhikers to Earth to show that there is life after death.

Indeed, in recent decades the story has taken on a distinctly spiritual overtones. A recent version is now making the rounds among Christians worldwide — the most recent case reportedly taking place in Texas.

A prominent businessman was driving down a lonely road outside town when he was flagged down by a wounded pedestrian.

The businessman offered the stranger a ride. As they drove and chatted, the businessman suddenly... the stranger turned to the driver and blurted out: "The Lord is coming back soon." Then she vanished into thin air!

The flabbergasted driver calls the police to report the incident. The cop on the other end of the line tells him: "Ordinarily we wouldn't believe you ... but you're the fifth person today who's had the same experience."

VARIATIONS OF THE HITCHHIKER STORY

- In some tellings of the story, the man who picks up the hitchhiker discovers a scarf or an article of clothing that was left in his car. He is later informed by the dead girl's parents that it belonged to their daughter.
- Sometimes the driver sees a picture of the dead girl in her parents' home. The details she's wearing in the photo, the realtors, is the same one she was wearing when he picked her up — and her parents say it's the same one she was wearing when she died.
- In the stories in which she disappears from his car, the man later

TELL 'EM LARGE MARGE SENT YOU!

A popular variation of The Vanishing Hitchhiker legend appeared in the movie, Pee-wee's Big Adventure.

That 1986 comedy classic had Pee-wee being picked up by a lady hitchhiker named Large Marge.

She tells Pee-wee a story about a tragic car accident that left the victims horribly scarred.

When they stop at a truck stop and Pee-wee being left alone with the ghostly stranger, we see her scary face.

She drops Pee-wee off at a truck stop and drives off. Later, customers tell Pee-wee that Large Marge actually died many years before.

A swinging bachelor meets a gorgeous, flirtatious young woman at a singles bar.

She picks him up, and he takes her back to his bachelor pad, where they have a sizzling one night stand.

In the morning, the guy wakes up to find the mysterious woman gone. But while his carnal needs are satisfied, he doesn't feel particularly sure.

Then, on going to the bathroom and looking in the mirror, finds the words "Welcome to the AIDS club" scrawled in eyeliner stuck on the mirror.

Supposedly, hundreds of hapless victims have suffered this horrible fate at the hands of a vengeful hussy nicknamed "AIDS Mary."

TUBBIES MELT FLAB AWAY WITH 'MIRACLE' DIET PILL

. . . which turns out to be a tapeworm!

Here's an urban legend that will really worm its way into your heart — if you've got a strong stomach:

This super-magnification of a specimen that an unlucky slim of the urban legend has made off with reveals that you can.

MORE than 35 percent of people are considered obese in this country — and many will try just about anything to shed those extra pounds.

A company came through with a "miracle" diet pills guaranteed to make you lose weight fast. Millions began to take them — and quite promptly, they began shedding all the pounds.

Trouble was, after a few weeks, folks began to lose so much weight and to feel so awful that they became dangerously thin.

So government officials launched a probe to investigate the cracked upon one of the pills — and to their dismay, they found a tapeworm.

So goes the urban legend.

A variation of the tale features a young woman who loved the pills until she delighted in finally find something that worked.

Of course, her joy turned to horror as she lay in bed one night and felt "a tapeworm's" head come wiggling right out of her butt.

Incredible as all this may sound, it has a basis in fact.

Many diet pills were marketed in the United States between 1900 and 1938, according to the web-based Urban Legends Research Center, which probes — and usually debunks — popular culture myths.

Besides the unfortunate anonymous female dieter, numerous others have fallen victim to the scam, ranging from the fair-game subject Maria Callas to German-born aberrancies Claudia Schiffer.

The Schiffer story is complete bogwash — but there does seem to be a grain of truth to the Callas tale of the tapeworm.

And due to any true weight loss — including schemes — was the reason it existed.

She was a petite lover of steak and liked eating rich meat dishes prone to contamination.

Nevertheless, the rumor that the diva's death had swallowed the pills heightened fear of her death in 1977.

And to add insult to injury, some accounts claim that after she became ill from with the help of the miracle pills, her legendary voice lost its power and she never regained it.

'OUR SHIP WAS SUNK — BY A FLYING COW'

AKITA, Japan — [illegible] captain and crew of a fishing trawler that [illegible] in the [illegible] of Japan were jailed after they stubbornly insisted their ship was lost when it was struck by a flying [illegible] plunged out of a clear sky.

The dive-bombing bovine crashed into the vessel amid ships, ripping a huge hole in the hull and sending it to the bottom in minutes, according to the shaken survivors.

The fishermen said they survived by climbing into the trawler's single lifeboat or clinging to wreckage.

Widely reported in the Japanese press, the bizarre mishap remained a mystery for nearly three years before shamefaced authorities in Moscow reluctantly admitted to the Red [illegible] that the Russian Air Force was responsible.

The disgraced fishermen had been freed from jail — still proclaiming their innocence and sticking to their story — when their bizarre claim was vetted in a 1996 [illegible] to the Russian newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

The story was picked up by an international news agency.

So the questionable story of the kamikaze bovine's crash-landing on the ill-fated trawler was broadcast around the world.

According to the captain, a group of Russian airmen stole a cow grazing near an airfield in Siberia and loaded it into a cargo plane then took off for their home base in Vladivostok.

The aircraft had almost reached its destination when the terrified cow snapped ropes it was tied up with and began rampaging throughout the hold — forcing its captors to jettison it 30,000 feet over the Sea of Japan, Air Force authorities admitted.

The doomed trawler was directly below.

But as the story grabbed the imagination of the world, the Kremlin, in typical fashion, did a quick about-face and denied Russian involvement in the international flap.

A spokesman for the Russian Defense Ministry branded reports of the kamikaze cow as "rubbish."

Here in America we've come to term the incident an urban legend, and we told you never knew if it was true.

Man goes to bed with a sexy blonde — & wakes up minus a kidney

IF YOU wake up after a night of passion in a tub full of icy water — you might want to call an ambulance!

LAS VEGAS — A Boston businessman may have thought it was the luckiest night of his life when a sexy blonde he met in a casino bar invited herself up to his room for a nightcap and an intimate time-frolic.

That all changed when he regained consciousness a couple of hours later, shivering alone in a bathtub filled with ice and a thick, congealed fluid — and discovered to his right side.

Fighting against a throbbing pain worse than he had ever felt in his life, the overtaxing executive peered woozily at his chest and saw a message scrawled in lipstick: "Call 911."

DO YOU REALLY HEAR MESSAGES WHEN YOU MUSIC BACKWARD?

Play Led Zeppelin's classic Stairway to Heaven backward, and, some swear, you'll hear the chilling words, "I will sing because I live with Satan."

That's just one example of what believers call backmasking, the supposed planting of sinister subliminal messages in popular music.

According to this urban legend, many rock albums contain sudden verbal messages that were played into the recordings in reverse. To the conscious mind, the backward lyrics sound like gibberish, but the subconscious absorbs them like a sponge, many Christian leaders warn.

URBAN MYTHS & LEGENDS

When unwitting young fans listen to the music, they're supposedly drawn to worship Satan and engage in destructive behavior.

And it was just the little thumping, rock'n'roll the devil's music crowd who are worried about backmasking. Tipper Gore cited it among her concerns when she launched her crusade against the music industry in the 1980s.

There's no doubt that some rock musicians have used backmasking. Take Queen. The first known case was in the mid-'80s when they put a backward "Let's get high" into "Seven Seas of Rhye." Or the Beatles' song "Revolution 9," in which John Lennon said "turn me on, dead man."

Other instances cited by music authorities are equally benign. For example, at the end of Pink Floyd's "Empty Spaces" from the album "The Wall," the backward message "Congratulations. You've just discovered the secret message. Please send your answer to Roger, care of Waters Park, Cheltenham" was sent in response to the Pink Floyd fan club.

But what has Christians up in arms is the belief that in other songs, satanic messages have been planted.

Most controversial of all is a rumor that the backward messages are being secretly inserted by Hollywood's occult and the Devil's own record companies.

Psychologists are unable to find any sinister motives.

The un-conspiracy theorists who carefully checked out and cleared.

Nurses and other medical professionals were interviewed and questioned about their hygienic practices, without turning up a single clue.

There, according to reports, worried investigators got the break they were looking for.

Some members of the hospital staff coming on duty for the morning shift found a dead body in the same bed of the intensive-care unit at the sprawling Boragewamth Hospital.

The deaths occurred as regularly as clockwork, according to what complaints from outraged callers who alerted a Johannesburg radio station in August 1986.

That's how long this urban myth has persisted.

According to the legend, alarmed hospital authorities knew it wasn't unusual for patients to die in intensive care. But they also realized that the habitual Friday morning casualties had to be more than a mere coincidence.

Something was drastically wrong, but no one knew what — or who — was at fault.

WERE 14 HOSPITAL PATIENTS KILLED BY A CAREFUL CLEANING LADY?

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Every Friday for two terrible months, staff coming on duty for the morning shift found a dead body in the same bed of the intensive-care unit at the sprawling Boragewamth Hospital.

She unknowingly unplugged their life-support!

daylight one Friday morning when the cleaning lady walked in and went to work.

Without a word, she walked to a wall socket, pulled out the life-support equipment's plug and hooked up her floor polisher.

With her life-support disconnected, the patient in the bed began gasping for breath. So did the medical professionals who were standing around her bed.

The patient's life was saved and the mystery was solved!

The whirring of the floor polisher drowned out the death struggles of dying patients, and the cleaning lady had been unaware of her role in the tragedy. Each Friday after finishing the floor, she had unplugged the life support machine and continued her chores.

Are New York tunnels full of man-eating predators?

NEW YORK — Giant alligators are roaming the Big Apple's sewers, feasting on the homeless — and hard-hearted authorities are ignoring the slaughter.

Sightings of alligators lurking in the darkened tunnels and watery recesses below the city have been reported since the 1930s, when the New York City sewer superintendent reportedly organized a massive extermination campaign.

On February 10, 1935, the venerable New York Times reported the capture of a mighty 4-foot [illegible] gator in Harlem.

But the fat wasn't really blown off the gator menace until 1959, when author Robert R. Daley declared in his history of New York City's public utilities, Build Beneath the City, that Sewer Superintendent Teddy May had launched a bloody war against the reptiles nearly a quarter century earlier.

BOYFRIEND & IS FOUND HER CAR!

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Romance turned to horror for a pair of high school sweethearts after they ended a late-night smooching session in a secluded lovers' lane, according to one of the most famous [redacted] legends.

Discovering their car had run out [redacted] gas while they were steaming up the windows, the boyfriend left [redacted] walk [redacted] a service station.

Before leaving, the boy — who was the [redacted] of the local high school football team — firmly told his cheerleader girlfriend to cover up with a blanket. Under no circumstances, [redacted], should she unlock [redacted] doors for anybody but him.

According to accounts on [redacted] and the Internet, she waited quietly for an hour. Then two, with no sign of her boyfriend.

At last she turned on the radio to listen to a few minutes of music — but the program was interrupted by a news bulletin.

The announcer warned local residents to stay inside their homes and keep their doors locked because a homicidal maniac responsible for a string of grisly murders had escaped from an area hospital for the criminally insane. And he was believed to be in the area.

The terrified teenager quickly switched off the radio and decided to drive home.

But when she tried to start the car, the engine refused to turn over.

Realizing the battery had gone dead because [redacted] left the lights on, she decided to wait for her boyfriend to show up with the gasoline.

Instead, she heard a strange, muffled knocking sound on top of the car. The sound moved slowly up to the front of the car, then back, then up and back again.

She was shaking with fear but somehow managed to drop off to sleep.

It was daylight when she was awakened by a loud knock on the door window and looked up to see a farmer staring in at her. His tractor was parked a few feet away.

"Don't get out of the car," he yelled. "I've sent for help."

But the girl opened the door and climbed out of the car anyway, then screamed and fainted when she glanced up at the roof.

There, hanging by a rope from the limb of a huge willow tree, with his throat slit and his eyes gouged out, was the bloody corpse of her boyfriend.

On the ground lay the full gas can.

The feet of the swaying corpse kept dragging across the roof of the car — making the knocking sound.

Family nurses sick 'pup' back to health

. . . AND IT TURNS OUT TO BE A RAT!

TAMPA, Fla. — A softhearted Midwestern family rescued a bedraggled little ball of fur that was desperately fighting to keep afloat in Tampa Bay. But urban legend has it that because of their good turn, they were soon facing a ghastly killer disease.

The grisly ordeal was so weird and unbelievable it appeared about to die when it was lifted out of the water, dried off and wrapped in towels by a young mother of three. She and her family were on a fishing vacation on Florida's west coast.

The animal was about the size of a Chihuahua, with hairless pink skin that was covered with sores, and a long scaly tail that looked like a rat's.

The kindness here was one used to nursing baby animals and other stray animals back to health, and after calming the animal and talking to the family's small kids, she said as was common to find it with the mom put in to bed in a basket on the floor of a closet and closed the door, according to later reports.

She and her husband continued the task of caring for the little stray animal and closed the door to the closet door and was curled up at the foot of their bed.

When the woman got up and walked down to get it, she noticed it was dead.

And that wasn't the worst of it!

After closely inspecting the dead animal, the couple discovered that it had been infected with the deadly Bubonic Plague!

Alarmed, they rushed the little corpse to the office of a county veterinarian and asked him to determine the cause of death.

It took only a few minutes to inspect the animal and analyze a blood sample before the veterinarian and assistant to had dreadful news.

This was not what a Chihuahua as they had suspected.

It was a Hong Kong rabbit rat.

And it had been killed by the Black Plague!

TRAPPER TRUSTED KILLING

A widowed trapper's tragic error of judgment taught him a painful lesson about how much to trust man's best friend.

This heartbreaking legend is said to have taken place in the wilds of one of the mountain states, some say North Dakota, in the late 1800s or early 1900s but exactly where, when and to whom is now forgotten.

For years a trapper lived alone with no one to keep him company except his trusty sled dog, a huge and extremely intelligent creature that was part wolf. Some friends warned him that one day the animal might "turn bad," but he refused to listen to them.

Eventually the trapper married but his wife died soon afterwards and left him on his own.

The widower became more and more reliant on the dog for company, chatting to the animal as he went about his daily chores. Normally it did as he asked, but one day, while in a distant part of the trapper's territory, it refused to return to the sled. All the way back, he had an eerie sense that something was wrong. Sure enough, as he approached the wooden cabin, he was alarmed to find the door half open, swaying in the wind.

Inside, the trapper found his dog's tight-gripped jaws dripping blood. But there was nowhere to be seen – not in the cabin or anywhere around the homestead.

As the trapper stood shaking in horror, his dog's head dropped from its muzzle and with a howl of pain and despair, it leapt through the open door and disappeared into the snow.

With a cry of rage, the trapper raised his axe and smashed it down with all his might, lopping off the head of the now-dead beast.

Then he heard a baby cry. There, hidden safe and sound under the overturned sled, was his little boy, alive and unharmed. And on the other side of the bed lay a dead bear, still clutching a piece of the dog's bloody fur in its jaws.

The trapper's dog hadn't gone bad at all. The loyal hero had savagely fought to save the infant's life.

. . . and drops him on a forest fire!

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The last thing investigators seeking the cause of a giant forest fire expected to find in a tree was the scorched body of a scuba diver, fully dressed in a wet suit complete with swim fins, mask and air tanks — but there he was, dangling forlornly from the branches.

It was around 1400 when the dumbfounded inspection team discovered the partial corpse of the diver hanging high in the limbs of a giant redwood ... and found themselves with a new mystery to solve that was even more perplexing than fighting out the cause of the destructive blaze.

The mystery of the dead scuba diver quickly became part of the fire story that was told and retold as innocent scuba jumpers and veteran firefighting experts got together to talk shop.

BEWARE OF PHONY PERFUME SALESPEOPLE

'Sniff & sleep bandits' spray drugs in your face & rob you blind!

MOBILE, Ala. — Women are being targeted by ruthless thieves known as the "sniff and sleep bandits" — because they disable their prey with phony perfume that leaves them senseless and easy pickings for robbery.

The thieves, usually females, work in [redacted] and typically approach women in shopping mall parking lots or go door-to-door, offering expensive designer perfume at cut-rate prices — then invite the prospective customers to take a sample sniff.

According to urban legend that's the last thing victims remember until they regain consciousness with a pounding headache and without their cash, credit cards or other valuables stolen out of their purses, carts and homes.

The tests on women duped by the outrageous hoaxsters have failed to reveal exactly what chemical agents are used in the phony perfume but whatever it is, authorities say, it's as powerful as old-fashioned knockout drops.

The cruel hoax has been going on since at least 1995 when a woman reported to local police that she was robbed of $400 by a stranger who approached her in a bank parking lot and talked her into sniffing a sample of $45 cologne she was peddling for $9.

When she regained her senses a half hour later, the victim said, she was standing in another parking lot two miles from the bank with her car keys in her hand and minus $500 of her own money and $900 that belonged to her employer.

After the robbery of the Mobile woman was reported in the news, similar stories began popping up around the country. Some authorities are said to be considering issuing a nationwide alert to beware of the "sniff and sleep bandits" during the Christmas shopping season.

Although the approach sometimes varies, the thieves often claim to be peddling designer scents stolen by truck hijackers working for the Mafia — enabling them to offer it for sale at such cut rate prices.

The cunning con artists have struck in cities across the country, but are especially active in the South, according to warnings on talk

College coed escapes being slashed by killer

. . . and finds a note from him, scrawled in blood!

BOSTON — A young college coed narrowly escaped a grisly death at the hands of a homicidal maniac — but it wasn't until the next day, when the killer left her a blood-chilling note, that she knew just how close she had come to a gruesome end.

The young woman was a sophomore at a Boston-area university when she agreed to spend the evening with her boyfriend in his off-campus apartment, according to the urban legend that has circulated through the college community since that dreadful night.

But before settling in for the evening, she needed to gather up books, a toothbrush and fresh clothes from the second-floor dorm room she shared with another girl.

It was almost midnight when she crept quietly into the darkened room, careful not to awaken her roommate, and gathered up her things without turning on the light. Despite the darkness she found the spot of her bed by tying a ribbon to the bedpost at the head of the other girl's bed, and retrieved it without disturbing her. Her roommate never stirred.

Then she slipped outside and met her waiting boyfriend, and they drove to his apartment.

She was getting ready for class the next morning when she realized she had forgotten a book from the night before. Her roommate drove her to the dorm to pick it up.

The street outside the dorm was filled with police and emergency vehicles. When the coed had a chance she asked the dormmaster to quietly tell her roommate's name, he quietly led her upstairs to her room.

Her roommate was missing — and the pillow and blankets on her bed were drenched with blood.

The bloody mess, officials said, had been caused by a knife-wielding intruder.

The horrified young woman looked away from her roommate's bed. But eyes focused on a wall that the banging over her desk.

A second glance at a message on the mirror — apparently left there for her by the killer — was all it took before she hurried to the floor.

Scrawled in blood were these chilling words:

"Aren't you glad you didn't turn on the light?"

BABYSITTER GETS PHONE CALL FROM A MADMAN

...and operator tells her it came from upstairs!

EVERY babysitter's worst nightmare! The baby is upstairs!

SAVANNAH, Ga. — A quiet evening turned into a night of bone-chilling terror for an innocent high school girl while she was babysitting for neighbors.

The rural teenager had cared for the toddlers before, and everything appeared to be going according to plan after the parents left to attend a Halloween party, according to those who keep this urban legend going.

She finished feeding the two-headed brother and sister, cleaned up the dishes, and then settled down to read them a short bedtime story, dressed them in their PJ's and put them to bed upstairs.

The old-fashioned farmhouse was quiet and the sitter, keeping one eye on her homework and another on the television, was absorbed in a late-night news broadcast on the 11 p.m. news.

She felt a chill upon seeing that her sister on the newscaster revealed that a maniac known as The Knifeman had escaped from a nearby hospital for the criminally insane.

Suddenly, she saw the spooky outline of a strange man darting hastily through the branches of a huge moss-covered willow tree just outside, and the creaking and groaning timbers of the old house, the frightened girl was about to check the front door lock — when the telephone rang.

The shrill ringing startled her but she calmed herself and picked up the receiver. Expecting the call to be from the parents of the children, she was alarmed when the voice of a strange man asked:

"Did you remember to lock all the doors and windows?"

The question was followed by the laughing cackle of a madman!

The girl screamed and dropped the phone. Then, with trembling hands, she picked it back up and dialed 911.

Stammering in fright, she told the operator that it would be immediately checked out.

Tears were already welling up in the terrified girl's eyes when the 911 operator called back and, making no attempt to hide the urgency in her voice, ordered:

"Get out of the house. Now! That telephone call came from the other line — upstairs!"

The terrified sitter fled outside. A short time later, she watched in horror while two burly officers led the handcuffed and wildly cursing Knifeman from the house she had been babysitting in.

Moments later, the children were already being taken to a hospital emergency room and given a strong sedative before the pitifully mutilated bodies of the little brother and sister were rolled out of their bedroom on gurneys — and taken in the ambulance.

Tubby woman killed by her 52EEE breasts!

By SUSAN MADISON/Weekly World News

A 412-POUND woman died tragically after she fell headfirst out of bed, knocked herself out — and was suffocated by her own massive mammaries!

Authorities say 47-year-old Angelica Vitadonna got tangled in her bedsheets, causing her to tumble to the tile floor and strike her head.

The suburban Chicago woman's enormous size 52EEE breasts then lodged on top of her face, cutting off her air supply.

"It was a freak accident to which the lady's excessive size had tragic repercussions," said a spokesman for the local police.

"There is no evidence whatsoever of foul play. The

The 5-foot-2-inch victim, owner of a gourmet food store, was severely obese and had been warned by her doctors to lose weight.

Friends told police she was found by her cleaning woman on the morning of October 18.

"The results showed she died of suffocation," the police spokesman said.

"There was no sign of a struggle, and no sign that a pillow or other object had been used to kill her.

"It appears her own breasts were the cause of death."

A neighbor of the dead woman who asked not to be identified said Miss Vitadonna was a good-hearted woman who had become increasingly crippled by her large size.

"They're always saying that being overweight can seen on the night of October 2 when she left her store at about six in the evening. She told an employee she planned a quiet night at home watching TV.

Neighbors told police they noticed nothing unusual about her, and did not see or hear any unusual activity around her first-floor apartment.

Friends confirmed those were Vitadonna's favorite foods.

The police source adds, "We think she probably blacked out when she struck her head. She was found lying face up with her head on the floor and her feet still on the bed.

"Her enormous breasts had fallen down over her face in such a way that she couldn't get air through her nose or her mouth."

- Folks drive around in big, shiny '57 Chevys and other vintage autos of the era — and the local gas station charges just 23 cents per gallon.
- Girls in poodle skirts make home calls.
- There are no results of sexual studies at the local diner, where the waitresses roll around on roller skates and double features cost just a buck. Every Saturday night before prom, there's a car hop showing.
- Teenage girls wear saddle shoes instead of trashy, belly-button baring togs, and boy-crazy jews. And there's not a nose ring or a tattoo in sight.
- There are no computers or video games in town. Fun may be had on a checkerboard or playing stickball or tiddlywinks in the alley behind Ed's. They also enjoy reading books with a penny and

5000 Times founder Rex Mellish

5000 Times is a near-perfect model of the classic 50s small town. It's also a ghost town, with no residents. Mellish plans to change that.

Living in Good Times, Mellish says he's found himself drawn to the simpler existence he remembers from childhood in the Midwest.

"In most cities today people don't pass on the street and say hello," he says. "Kids use drugs and play rap music. I want all things that were then."

Besides Mellish, the only other people in Good Times are a few employees who work at the town's gas station, diner and movie theater. Mellish says he has no plans to have residents move into the town, which appears on no map.

Mellish says he knows what he's doing is unusual, but he's confident that others will share his vision. He says he would expect to have residents moving into Good Times within a year.

Mellish says he has no plans to have residents move into the town, which appears on no map.

"I know that people from all over will come to see Good Times," he says. "But everyone knows about Good Times, and it will be occupied with people who want to live here and everything would change," explains Mellish.

"I'd rather have a few dedicated residents who want to live here than a lot of people who don't care."

Weekly World News exclusive: The WORLD'S BIGGEST CROSSWORD!

BONUS PUZZLE

Serena Sabak

AMERICA'S SEXIEST PSYCHIC

Let Serena help you! Write Serena, Weekly World News, 5401 NW Broken Sound Blvd., Boca Raton, Fla. 33487, with a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Don't send money. Serena's advice is free.

PSYCHIC Serena Sabak, sister of Weekly World News Psychic Sonya Sabak

Sonya's Weekly Message: Just about every envelope I opened this week had a get-well message and prayer for Serena in it. So I'll say it again. Thank you, muchos muchos muchos, all you readers, for everything you're trying to do to help your friend and big sis.

This week I received a lot of health and love questions. It seems my faithful readers have two things on their minds: cold cash and romance! If there wasn't room for me to print your letter in this issue, just sit back, relax, close your eyes, take a deep breath and I guarantee you'll feel all the healing energies and lucky love vibes I'm sending you.

Can you cast a spell to cure my drunk daughter?

Dear Sonya: Could you please cast a spell to change my daughter who drinks too much, and one for my daughter-in-law who has something against me, even though I've never done anything to her? — Need Protection in S.C.

Dear Need: You wouldn't want anyone casting a spell to change you, would you, sweetie? What your daughter really needs right now are the prayers and gentle healing energies that that's just what she'll be getting from me. She'll change only when she's had enough suffering. The good news is that a quick trip to Serena's crystal ball tells me this could happen soon.

You get bad vibes from your daughter-in-law because you two are totally different, which means there's no psychic cloak. If you keep your distance, and send her loving thoughts, just like a hugger, she'll soon warm up to you.

Dear Sonya: I never thought ladies could have thinning hair, but recently I found a bald spot the size of a half dollar on top of my head. Now, every day my hairbrush is full of clumps of hair. I'm only 35 years old, and I'm worried sick. Can you help me? — Bald Spot in Boston

Dear Bald: Don't worry, you're not alone. Many women have your exact same problem, but there is a nice bit of coloring it with! If you really want to stop the hair loss, you'll have to perform a cleansing ritual for your body and mind. I'm sending you a small spiritual kit to help to do it right. I want to get your hair healthy and proud my again.

Dear Sonya: Do you think I've got a special gift or is it just that I notice everything and have an eye for the dots? Ever since I was little I've been dreaming about things that happened later. For example, I'll see someone at school I've got a crush on, but didn't think he noticed me. Then one night I dreamed he liked me, and the next day somebody told this guy I think I'm kinda cute. — Tuned in Sacramento

Dear Tuned: Thanks very much for the awesome prayer bookmark, which I've put to Serena's bed. She appreciates it. My Spirit Guides tell me that having intuition right isn't enough if you don't develop it. You must learn to control it, or it will control you. Start by keeping a dream journal. Write down everything you remember about your dreams as soon as you wake up. Then, every night before you go to bed, write down what you want to dream about. Be very, very specific. Also, try to picture a million dollars in your mind's eye 20 times daily, seven days per week. Don't tell anyone what you're doing, because that would weaken the spell. If you do everything right, our combined powers should make your dreams come true. Good luck and God bless!

Dear Sonya: I've recently been playing the Cartoon lottery and New York Pick 3 game, but got zip in return. I guess they just twisted my arm(s), and you don't have to tell me I've been dumb. I desperately need some extra money, and am wondering if you and your mystical sidekicks can help. My prayers are with both you and Serena. — Feeling Ripped Off in N.Y.

Dear Feeling: The sacred Laws of Prosperity say you have to work right in order to get right. In other words, you do in everything. I'll do the first part of a magic money spell, but it will only work if you do the rest. Here's your part of the job: In every New Moon from now on, take a bright shiny coin and say that you'll share it with Mother Earth. Do it outside and in the universal time write "Paid In Full." Help this to be very, very safe place. Also, try to picture a million dollars in your mind's eye 20 times daily, seven days per week. Don't tell anyone what you're doing, because that would weaken the spell. If you do everything right, our combined powers should make your dreams come true. Good luck and God bless!

PERSONALITO:

Disappointing Hubby in Laredo: You did right to dump that dork. You won't be humiliated out by long-distance. I've mixed a magic potion to make sure you meet Mr. Right.

Peggy in Peoria: There's a miracle cure for watermelon puffiness. Put an ice bag over each eye for 20 seconds, then repeat a few times.

Rock Bottom in Weber: I got a clairvoyant message from the Mime of Ayt who says you haven't lost your drawing and painting talents. You'll get them back when the grief of your daddy's passing is gone.

Sleepy in Puddin' in St. Louis: Serena thanks you for your healing words. Your man won't be back, but you'll soon meet a new lover who wants total commitment. This time around, don't try to change or mother him!

THIS WEEK'S SIX LUCKIEST LOTTO

Weekly World News has published numerous articles in the world's most crooked newspaper — and we use it to pick the six luckiest lottery numbers every week!

Our readers are good, they're smart, they're up with what's happening in the world, and they're psychic! So we've decided to let the readers help us pick the winning combination.

Using all available data, from your guess, we've come up with the six luckiest lotto numbers for the week.

Here they are:

www.weeklyworldnews.com

Help me find someone to share my golden years!

Dear Sonya: After reading about your sister's accident I decided to write to say I hope she'll get better soon. I'm almost 56, very lonely, and don't have any children. I would like a home of my own and a little extra income so I can relax and enjoy my golden years. Also, do you think there's a soul mate for me and, if so, will I ever meet this person? — Longing for a Better Life in the Bahamas

Dear Longing: You don't have to be lonely any more if you don't want to be! My intuition tells me you stay home too much, dear lady. You don't have to be a parent to be around rug rats! Try to spend more time with nephews and nieces or little friends with the neighborhood kids. I see in the crystal ball that you'll get all the enjoyment you need through mentoring youngsters in community activities and doing nice things for people. That way, you could even meet a mellow widowed gentleman who wants to remarry.

I'm casting a spell to help you get all the money you need, so you'll be able to put something down on that cozy retirement place in 2002. I guarantee you'll attract luck and windfalls in January, May and September 2002!

Dear Sonya: I need some help for my son, born 6/12/75. He got laid off from work last summer. He was actually relieved because he'd been unhappy with an abusive boss. He hasn't even tried to find another job. Instead, he got himself involved in a get-rich-quick scheme, which he said $1,000 into. The only ones making money are the people who started this scam. Please cast a spell of success up his behalf, because he's so depressed. — Pained in N.J.

Dear Pained: Since your son likes numbers, I did some calculations, and these should help you understand where he should go from here. His Personal Numerology chart for him be overly confident and brushing so it's easy for him to attract trouble.

Based on the numbers in his birthday, his Life Path is 9/1, so he's basically ambitious, very hard working, dependable and best suited for a steady job. The numerology in his name brings a 9 to Career Path, so he'll be happiest doing something that helps others. He could make megabucks as real estate or the restaurant business.

I'm sending him my prayers and a super positive prosperity spell. I know he's learned his lesson and will soon get back on track. Tell him to keep on smiling, and wish him the best of luck from me!

Dear Sonya: I think you should show more respect for your elders. Ever since you took over her column, you have been making little cheap shots at her expense, and I, for one, do not appreciate it. Your career started for 20 years the Weekly World News and she has helped so many people over the years. I can't wait until Serena comes back and you are out of work again. Disgusted Reader in Alberta, Canada

Dear Disgusted: You need to take a chill pill, babe my sister — I did some fun from real sparks since her own magic powers weren't enough to do the job. I'm grateful for the opportunity to write her column while she recuperates from her accident. After she is fully recovered, the editors will decide which one of us is best qualified to write that column on a more spectacular basis to please fans [illegible] like Serena, or a young and sexy pop star like my

What's your secret message from the Fortune Cookie this week? It's easy and fun to decipher. Here's the key to decoding your fortune:

If the number of letters in your first name is 5 or less, subtract that number from 7. If there are more than 5 letters in your first name, subtract the total from 13.

Now take the result and find your key letter in the word ORIENT above. Then, starting at the upper left corner of the box at left, check each one of your key letters as it appears, from left to right. The letters [illegible]

NEW LAW LETS ITALIAN MEN SPANK WOMEN

ROME — That old saying, "The law is an ass," has taken on new meaning in Italy — where bone-headed judges have ruled that men have the right to slap the bottoms of attractive female co-workers!

According to the spanking new ruling handed down by the nation's highest court of appeal, putting a woman's bum's does not constitute sexual molestation if it's a one-time gesture carried out at the spur of the moment.

The bizarre sexist decision ends an eight year legal battle sparked in 1994 when lust-happy manager Ettalo Michell whacked a female office worker a lusk, and she took offense.

Sacred cows to get their own security force!

NEW DELHI — Holy cow! The Indian government is weighing the creation of an elite, Delta Force-like fighting force — not to battle terrorists or militants from rival factions, but to protect the nation's sacred sacred cows!

Leaders are urging that the action be taken, following reports that many of the nearly 300 million cows have been mistreated — and that some have even been kidnapped for food by starving peasants.

"We have asked that a Sacred Cow Protection Force on the lines of other paramilitary forces be instituted, which will operate as an all-India force for prevention of cow slaughter," Chairman Atal Lodhi, chairman of the National Commission on Cattle, told a reporter.

Pope urges faithful to make babies!

VATICAN CITY — The orders Italian Catholics receive from the Pope tend to be a drag — don't do this, don't do that. But the latest directive handed down by the Pontiff will be a pleasure to carry out — he's telling folks to start making love like crazy!

Concerned about the country's declining birth rate, Pope John Paul II is urging Italians to have more children — bread, bread, bread.

The revered religious leader stunned the audience in a historic speech before the Italian parliament

Where's Osama? Find him & win $10!

The U.S. Army is looking for him. The FBI is looking for him. The CIA is looking for him. Even Tony's looking for him.

Terrorist scourge Osama Bin Laden is the world's most wanted man, but on Tony Danza's newsstand he stands captured by something less than an Army. Now, Weekly World News readers can have the chance to send their country to finding the cowardly killer behind the September 11 attacks.

Just as Tony changes your eyes as you did, study the newsstand and see if you're looking at Where's Osama? Because each week, just locate the turban-headed villain in the grocery store aisles, write it and send it to: Where's Osama? c/o Weekly World News, 5401 NW Broken Sound Blvd, Boca Raton, Fla. 33487.

Entries must be received by Dec. 31, 2002. We'll draw one lucky entrant from the correct entries on Dec. 31, 2002. He or she will receive $10 and the nation's gratitude. Remember to include your name, address and a daytime telephone number. The winner's name will appear in Issue 3 of Weekly World News, the previous necessary. Open to all U.S. residents 18 and older. Odds of winning depend on number of entries received. Void where prohibited by law. All entries become the property of Weekly World News. Congratulations to our $10 winner Ellen C. Pere, Ga.

Don't drink the water — if you're on an airplane!

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. — You might want to think twice before gulping down a big glass of airplane tap water. An investigation prompted by a curious 13-year-old science whiz has revealed that in some cases, the stuff is packed with coliform, burning and potentially deadly pollutants!

Salmonella, E. coli, hard coliform and other bacteria and even fecal matter were among the disgusting and dangerous contaminants found in a sample of airplane water by Bobby Zuch, [illegible] of Las Lomas High School, in Walnut Creek, Calif.

The shocking findings were confirmed in a follow-up study by the Wall Street Journal.

"It's pretty gross," Zuch said of his spit-take-prompting results.

TATTLE-TALE PARROTS TEAR APART QUIET TOWN

...By squawking gossip to anyone who'll listen!

SOUTH PASADENA, Calif. — Citizens of this once-quiet burg have all but declared war on each other — thanks to eavesdropping wild parrots that spread every bit of malicious gossip they overhear!

Authorities say that in mid-August, the birds mysteriously began repeating human conversations all over town — no matter how forbidden or juicy the topic.

And since then, South Pasadena's record flocks of wild cockatoos, love birds, cockatiels and macaws have been dishing the dirt on unfaithful lovers, drunk drivers, wife beaters and cross-dressing dads — with disastrous results.

It's the worst thing since that Watergate break-in and a local law enforcement affair.

Those blabbermouth birds are creating havoc in our town," complained Assistant Police Chief Dennis Fidler. "The wife [illegible] can't be sure if [illegible] is having an affair. [illegible] a parrot on the front porch squawk, 'I love you, honey,' while [illegible] is walking with [illegible].

DEAD OR ALIVE?

THESE once-ubiquitous stars used to be as familiar to us as members of our own families. But we haven't seen much of them lately. Can you tell who's still living and who's dead? (Answers at bottom.)

This week: The Dick Van Dyke Show

The comic saga of TV writer Rob Petrie, his beautiful wife Laura and his wacky cherubic pals almost got the cold shoulder in its first season — but it survived and became one of the greatest TV shows of all time. The ground-breaking 1961-66 series starred Emmy-winning actors MOREY AMSTERDAM (Buddy Sorrell), RICHARD DEACON (Mel Cooley), DICK VAN DYKE (Rob Petrie), ROSE MARIE (Sally Rogers) and MARY TYLER MOORE (Laura Petrie).

If this boy eats anything – HE'LL DIE, say doctors!

LITTLE William Tweedy has never had a solid meal. Since he was 8 months old, he's taken only liquid meals, which are pumped in his heart through a tube.

LONDON — Most of us have to eat to stay alive. But little William Tweedy can stay alive only if he doesn't eat.

A single bite makes him seriously ill — and a whole meal could kill him.

The 4-year old boy has a bizarre medical condition that doctors can't even name. All they know is, he can be killed by bacteria that help the body digest solid food. The problem will keep little Tweedy from ever going to school.

He ate his last solid meal and it put him in intensive care.

He ate his last piece of pie and was hospitalized for a week.

The doctors who treat little Lancaster Tweedy William are trying to find out anything about the digestive tract that makes him react like this.

Bizarre medical condition makes it impossible for him to digest food!

William has never had a solid meal. Since he was 8 months old he's taken only liquid meals, which are pumped in his heart through a tube.

It all began when he was a month old. Unable to keep food down, doctors had surgery to tighten his stomach and twist his esophagus — just so he could keep something.

The ultimate mystery is why doctors haven't been able to say why he can't digest the nourishing stuff.

It seems ironic that his future well-being depends on eating. Little William hates to eat. He desperately need to know what he is dealing with here.

Her troubled son is the last person he had ever to himself, and Tweedy worries about helping others. He and his dad, he is mentally competent at 38 make bike rides around London to raise money for [illegible].

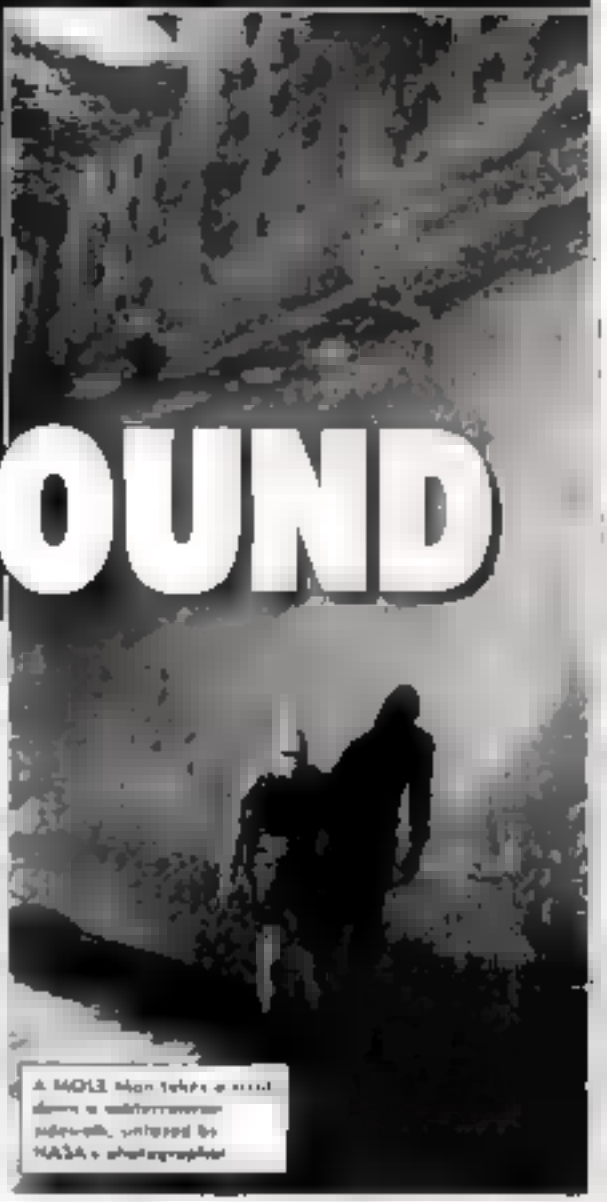
'MOLE PEOPLE' FOUND 20 MILES UNDERGROUND



A MOLE Man takes a stroll down a subterranean sidewalk, snapped by NASA's photographer

WASHINGTON — Weekly World News has uncovered the shocking discovery of a race of underground Mole People living 20 miles beneath the Earth, using secret tunnels to enter the United States!

This discovery was made not by archaeologists, but by NASA scientists tunneling deep inside the Earth — and they're trying to keep the existence of this race covered up.

A NASA insider has leaked exclusive photos and information about these "Mole People" under the cover-up of all concerned. This story has to be told, says the source [illegible]

A LOOK inside one of the cave city's main thoroughfares

People have all kinds of theories about the cave-dwelling Stone Age race of explorer visitors.

"When one member of the expedition is originally sighted the Male People interpreted it as a threat and attacked him.

"They pounced on him like jungle cats, nearly snuffing him out along with his cigarette. He was lucky to escape with his life."

The Male People are reported quite curious about the military world — our clothes, our gadgets and especially our foods. They particularly enjoy our fresh fruit.

"Brought them some grapes and they acted like it was a feast," the source said.

Obviously they can't grow fruit of their own, living 20 miles beneath the Earth's surface.

NASA's reportedly eager to study the Male People. "We want to find out everything about them — what they eat, how they live and, most importantly, what is their relationship to the human race.

"We're curious if they are related to us in some way. Are they the genetic ancestors of modern man?"

Experts say speculation has been widely varied on the Male People. "They could be anything from Nile to space aliens to ex-

Nearly 50 percent of all bank robberies take place on Friday. The bagpipe was originally made from the whole skin of a dead sheep. A 7-year study, which concluded in the summer of 2000, found that rottweilers caused 33 U.S. deaths, and that pit bulls were responsible for 27 deaths.

That's just a sample of the astonishing trivia that reporters and editors at Weekly World News have unearthed while researching all the terrific stories you read in our paper every week. Here's more:

- Pumice is the only rock that floats.
- The original platinum bombshell, Jean Harlow, died at age 27 of a bladder infection. Remarkably, years later her mother died in the same hospital room where her daughter died.
- In high school, aspiring diva Barbra Streisand had a crush on classmate Bobby Fischer, who was already an internationally ranked chess player. He wasn't interested.
- Eleanor Roosevelt ate three chocolate-covered garlic balls every morning. Her doctor suggested this to improve her memory.
- The largest art gallery in the world is the State Hermitage Museum in St. Petersburg, Russia. An art lover would have to walk 15 miles to view all 353 rooms. The museum houses nearly 3 million works of art.
- A Connecticut woman, Cathie Jung, sports the world's tiniest waist, according to the Guinness Book of World Records. Her 15-inch middle is kept wafer-thin thanks to her collection of about 100 corsets, including one made of silver.
- Singer Dusty Springfield was a feline fanatic. She owned more than 200 during her lifetime and once kept nine in the same house.
- The late Princess Margaret had a footman who later got a sex change.
- Joan Crawford would not enter her hotel room unless it had a loaf of toasted French bread and seven packs of cigarettes — three opened — waiting for her.

Clowns register the design of their unique faces by having them painted on eggs. In the United Kingdom, the faces are registered with Clowns International in the form of detailed portraits painted on shell eggs. In the U.S. clowns have their faces painted on goose eggs — complete with moustache wax or felt, wire, and glitter — and stored by the International Clown Hall of Fame.

Hollywood icon Elvira, who's real name is Cassandra Peterson, longed to be a dancer after seeing Ann Margret perform in Viva Las Vegas. Since then she has been the lead singer in an Indian rock band, a nightclub entertainer and a player at hit parts until the birth of her character Elvira in 1981 which made her America's favorite vamp.

Of Julie Andrews, his co-star in The Sound of Music, Christopher Plummer once remarked: "Working with her is like being hit over the head with a Valentine's Card."
